WARREN G. CHILD ON DIRIGIBLE BOARD IN WASHINGTON

An Ogden young man, Warren G. Child, is now recognized as one of the naval authorities of the United States, and has been named a member of a board for dirigible design which is meeting in Washington.

A late issue of the Washington Post gives the personnel of the board, with a review of the work ahead of the experts, as follows:

Washington Post, Jan. 28, 1917.

"In accordance with the recommendations of a board of army and navy officers that recently considered the procedure to be followed in the construction of an immense airship of the dirigible or Zeppelin type out of funds to be supplied equally by the army and navy, a board to provide for and to superintend the construction has been appointed. This board will consist of Chief Constructor David Col. George O. Sauer and Capt. Charles de F. Chandler, of the signal corps of the army; Lieut. John H. Towers and Warren G. Child, of the navy; Capt. Virgil P. Clark, aviation officer, signal corps, and Assistant Naval Constructor Jerome C. Hunsaker of the navy.

Chief Constructor Taylor will be president of the board, and he will have general supervision of the design and construction of the airship. Lieut. Col. Squier, who will become chief signal officer of the army, with the rank of brigadier general, on retirement of Brig. Gen. George P. Scriven on February 13, and who now is the head of the army aviation service will be a valuable member of the board, because of his scientific attainments and because of the information as to aerodynamics he obtained while serving as military attaché at London from the beginning of the European war until a few months ago. Capt. Chandler is the balloon expert of the army, and now he is in command of the army balloon school at Fort Omaha, Neb. Lieut. Towers will represent the office of chief of naval operations on the board, and he has a wide knowledge of aeronautical matters generally. Lieut. Child is attached to the Navy Department bureau of steam engineering, and he is an internal combustion engine expert. Capt. Clark is one of the most noted airplane flyers of the army. Naval Constructor Hunsaker has given much attention to the construction phase of aeronautical problems and to aeronautics generally, and he is a valuable member of the board for that reason. In addition to the members of the board that are experts in engineering, construction, mechanical flight and ballooning the board will have available to it all the resources of both services and of the advisory board on aeronautics in the way of expert assistance and facilities. It is not expected an airship of the type and size contemplated can be designed and built in less than two or three years.

ZINC MINES AGAIN ON PROMONTORY ARE READY TO SHIP

County Attorney Charles L. Farr, secretary of the Lakeview Zinc Mines corporation, owned by E. O. Wattis, Isaac F. Farr, James Witherspoon and Charles L. Farr and others, today stated that more than enough zinc ore to fill ten of the largest cars has been awaiting cars and transportation for the last ten days and they could not obtain even one car.

MAN DISAPPEARS FROM HIS HOME

An elderly Austrian named Cerlek, unaccountably disappeared from his home in the vicinity of Shorten avenue several days ago. The case was reported to the police at the time by two fellow countrymen of Cerlek's, who also said that they would report back to the station if their search for their friend was unsuccessful. Nothing further has been heard of the matter, but it is feared by parties acquainted with the Austrian, who had been in bad health for some length of time, that he had become despondent and ended his life.

VENUE BILL CAUSES A STORM TO BREAK AT CAPITOL

(Held over from Saturday because of lack of space).

Governor Simon Bamberger was chief listener and referee in a dramatic hearing of arguments for and against the venue bill Friday afternoon. This bill, which so many fear the governor may veto, abolishes the unpopular practice of compelling all suits against railroads to be tried at Salt Lake, thus entailing heavy loss upon damage suit litigants and giving the railroads a club with which they force such claimants to compromise at ten cents on the dollar rather than engage in an expensive lawsuit.

Present as champions of the bill, imploring the governor to sign it, were Senator Joseph C. Cheez, author of the bill; former Judge J. A. Howell and Attorney George Halverson of Ogden; Attorney B. C. Call, brother of District Judge J. D. Call of Brigham City; Attorney J. W. Robinson and George T. Parker of Provo, and Jacob Evans of Salt Lake.

Present to fight the bill for the railroads, beseeching the governor to veto it, was Attorney W. D. Ritter, who is general counsel of the D. & R. G., the Western Pacific and other railroads.

Governor Bamberger called in Attorney General Dan B. Shields to hear the arguments.

"Anarchists," Says Ritter.
Senator Cheez opened the argument.

ASK FOR and GET
Horlick's
The Original
Malted Milk
Substitutes Cost YOU Same Price.

Former District Judge J. A. Howell delivered a powerful argument for the bill. He said, of his own judicial experience extending over many years, that the present system is absolutely unfair, unjust and thoroughly vicious, that the venue bill was fair and just to both the railroads and the public.

Attorney George Halverson's feelings were so wrought up that he kept control of his temper only by a supreme effort, then he said the Republicans lost thousands of votes in the last election because Governor Spry vetoed the same bill, introduced by Senator Cheez and passed two years ago. Before he could enlarge upon this argument, Governor Bamberger broke in with the remark that he did not care to hear argument along that line, but was interested only in "the law."

Mr. Call handled the subject without gloves. He said the dilatory tactics, the law's delay, under the present "wicked system," were intolerable to a free people; that the purpose of the venue bill was to expedite litigation, to save enormous expense to taxpayers; to protect the people in their rights; that at present it takes a year or more to get their rights in court, and then only at prohibitive expense.

Hot One for Judges.
Senator Cheez called attention to the fact that the five district judges of Salt Lake have confessed they could not handle the mass of litigation imposed upon them and they have been begging for two more judges for their district. He said they were advised to let the other counties handle their own business, to try railroad suits at home, where they belonged, and this would give the Salt Lake judges plenty of time for their own business.

Robinson's Warning.
Despite the governor's remark that he was interested only in "the law," Mr. Robinson declared he campaigned for the Bamberger ticket for five weeks and made this venue question an issue, promising his "outraged people" that the legislature and the governor would make the venue bill a law. He had pledged an adequate remedy to the governor's supporters and it was up to the governor to make good; that the present system is wicked, unjust and outrageous.

Shields Stands Pat.
Thus he riddled Mr. Ritter's argument against "anarchistic juries." The governor said that he fully indorsed the arguments for the bill, that he was a member of the legislature and on the judiciary committee which passed favorably upon the same measure two years ago—the bill which was vetoed by Governor Spry.

The governor, in conclusion, deferred action and gave no inkling of his intentions.

Lawyers Afraid to Go.
Several prominent lawyers of Ogden, who signed the protesting telegram to Governor Bamberger, urging him to sign the bill, assured a representative of The Standard they were afraid to attend the hearing before Governor Bamberger; that human nature has its limitations and they feared it would be impossible for them to keep from saying things that, in other less law-abiding sections, might cause slow music; that they felt outraged by the necessity of having to plead and argue for the keeping of a sacred pledge to the people.

The whole state is more or less wrought up over this question, and from every county, from men high in the councils of the Democratic party, from others high in rank among the Republicans and Progressives, all uniting without regard to party lines, Governor Bamberger is hearing of the public feeling on this question.
